

Presidential Homes Tours

Gordonsville is the perfect jumping off point to explore presidential estates and plantations within Virginia. A total of eight presidents have at least one still-standing Virginia home with which they were associated. Several of these landmarks are very close to each other and make for excellent day trips.

James Madison's Montpelier is located just 9 miles from Downtown Gordonsville. There are several ways to get there. You can go north on US 15 to Orange and then left on Route 20 to the main gate. You can also go north on Route 231 and then right on Route 20 to the main gate. The visitor center is an excellent starting point. Hours are Monday - Sunday, 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The first tour of the home is 10:00 a.m. and the last tour at 3:00 p.m. Check out the archeology digs that are underway! Also worth exploring: the trails through James Madison's Landmark Forest, a large parcel of woods that has gone largely undisturbed since 1790 and is filled with trees that are two and three centuries old. There also are trails exploring the Civil War history around Montpelier, as well as the Freedman's Farm Trail that leads to the Gilmore Cabin and Farm, which features a restored cabin built by an emancipated slave in the 1870s. Visit www.montpelier.org. Basic tours, $7-$20.

Zachary Taylor, the 12th president, was born at Montebello. The estate is located 4 miles west of Downtown Gordonsville on US 33. The home is privately owned and is not open for tours. An historic marker sits in front of the home and you can pull into the gated entrance to view the estate.

Thomas Jefferson's Monticello is located 21 miles south of Downtown Gordonsville just below Charlottesville. Although there are several ways to get there, the most direct route is to take Route 231. Travel south on Route 231 and merge on Route 22 west. Turn left onto US 250 east.
